Her patriotic decorating scheme of red, white and blue sparkles as she glides along the Cumberland River.

The original General Jackson was the first steamboat ever to make port in Nashville. The original steamboat was built in Pittsburgh and arrived in Nashville on March 11, 1819, inaugurating a regular run between Nashville and New Orleans. The original steamboat was built by a former governor of Tennessee, General William Carroll, who served as second-in-command under Andrew Jackson at the Battle of New Orleans.
